Delmas and Jerome at Odds.

Now that he has entered upon the crossexamination, he seems determined to make it a thorough one. There were evidences during the afternoon session of lil-feeling existing between Mr. Jerome and Mr. Delmas.

The latter intends to protect Mrs.
Thaw in every possible way. He moved from his accustomed place at Thaw's counsel table to a chair within the rall where the district attorney sits, and directly in front of Justice Pitzgerald.

Mr. Jerome informed the Californian that it was not courtesy in New York to interrupt an attorney when he was stating an objection. Mr. Delmas later was objecting to a question put by the prosecution when Mr. Jerome interrupted. Mr. Delmas turned and with great sarcasm remarked: "I have been told it is not courtesy in New York to interrupt when an objection is being stated." Mr. Jerome sat down.

Great Legal Duel.

Great Legal Duel.

Great Legal Duel.

Mrs. Thaw's cross-examination promises a duel between the attorneys as well as between Mr. Jerome and the wife of the defendant. Thaw seemed in a very cheerful frame of mind during the afternoon, especially when Mr. Delmas was insisting that the cross-examination of his wire should proceed.

The young man grew more soberfaced after Mr. Jerome had beguin to ply his questions in a way that indicated a relentless search into Mrs. Thaw's past life. Mr. Jerome did not even forgot the incident of the cat and the conductor who wanted to put it off the train. Mrs. Thaw had testified that she had told her husband of this incident in her early life. Mr. Jerome also remembered that Mrs. Thaw had also told of eating chocolate colaires at her first dinner with Stanford White. 'It wasn't dinner,' pounded the witness, "It was supper.'

The Pie Girl.

In completing her direct testimony, Mrs. Thaw had told of the conversations she and her husband had had regarding the fate of other young women at the hands of Stanford White, One of these girls was known as "The Pie Girl.' She was fifteen yours of age and wore only a gauze dress when she sprang from a big ple at a stag dinner.'

Harry Thaw's letter to Anthony Comstock describing three houses or studios, where he declared Stanford White and "other scoundrels" lured young girls, was read. Among the places described was the house on West Twenty-fourth Street, where the velvet swing and the mirrored bodroom were located.

Mrs. Caine on Stand.

Mrs. Caine on Stand.

Mrs. Thaw identified forty-two letters, which she said were in the handwriting of Stanford White. The letters were not offered in evidence, but Mr. Delmas will attempt later to get them into the case.

Mrs. Caine, who was the only other witness of the day, testified to overhearing Harry Thaw ask Mrs. Neshit for her daughter's hand in 1903. She gise testified as to how Harry Thaw acted when he saw Stanford White. She declared he appeared angry.

"As a man in the face of his enemy might appear," suggested Mr. Jerome, on stoss-examination.

"Yes," replied the witness, blithely, Mr. Delmas asked the witness if she 3id not mean that Thaw's conduct in the presence of White was irrational. She said she did.

To Mr. Jerome she ngain said that he appeared angry, Mr. Jerome questioned Mrs. Caine closely, and brought out many statements from her with resard to Harry Thaw and Evelyn Neshit. Among these was the fact that Mrs. Neshit ind not accompanied her daughter and Harry Thaw to Europe in 1904—the second trip abroad. He also got from Mrs. Caine the fact that Evelyn Neshit told her that the operation which has gigured so frequently in the case was for appendictius.

Mrs. Caine testified that Thaw had

White Boasted of "Pie Girl."

"Yes, sir; it was in Paris in 1993. He asked me what other girls I knew of who had suffered at the hands of Stanford White. I told him I had heard of the Pie Girl," whose name was known to both of us. A girl at the theatre had told me about it, and that night when Stanford White came, to my dressing-room I asked him about it. He asked me where I had heard the story. I told him a girl had told me about si, and the girl was put in a big pie with a lot of birds. She was very young—about fifteen years I think he said.

"He also told me that the girl had a heautiful figure and wore only a gauze dress, He helped put her in the pie and fix it. He said it was the best stant he ever saw at a dinner. When the girl jumped out of the pie the birds flew all about the room."

"What did Mr. Thaw say?"

"He said he must investigate this story and see what the truth of It was.

"When did he next talk about the story?" citis.

Mrs. Caine testified that Thaw had told Mrs. Nesbit he would provide for her and for her son always if she would consent to her daughter's marriage to him. Mrs. Nesbit promised to do her best to have Evelyn consent.

Two Attorneys Absent.

There were two vacant places at the table occupied by the attorneys for the defense to-day, the seats usually occupied by Mr. Gleason and Mr. Peabody, leaving only four lawyers present, Mr. Delmas, Mr. Hartridge, Mr. O'Reilly and Mr. McPile, it was said that Mr. Gleason was sufering from toothache. Mr. Peabody, it was said, was examining witnesses.

Concludes Her Direct Testimony and Is Turned Over for Cross-Examination.

NEW YORK, February 19.—Mrs. Thaw looked pale and serious as she took her place on the stand to finish the story of her connection with Mr. White: that she has wome every day since the trial began. She smiled slightly as she caught her husband's eye. Thaw returned the smile, and then turned to Attorney O'Roully, with whom he helked for a minute excitedly. Then he returned to his conversation with Dr. Evans, but for the most part kept his eyes on his wife, only occasionally turning to whisper in the doctor's ear.

"Did Mr. Thaw, at the time of your marriage and subsequent thereto, talk very much about the incident in your life connected with Stanford White?" asked Mr. Delmas.

Residence Caught from Spark But Blaze Was Quickly Extinguished.

FIRE CAUSED EXCITEMENT

Reported at First That Masonie Temple Was in Flames.

Fire of an unknown origin last night practically destroyed the stable in the rear of No. 18 West Broad Street, the store occupied by John T. Anderson & Sons, and threatened for a time to do great damage to adjoining property.

Residents of Chay and Marshall Streets in the vicinity of the place were alarmed, and but for the prompt work of the firemen, assisted very materially by the police, the blaze would have fleen of a very serious nature.

As it was the residence at No. 9 West Marshall Street, almost two blocks away, caught from a spark and a stream had to be thrown upon the roof. Mr. Jackson and Mr. Vincent occupied this home.

The alarm was turned in at 7:30 o'clock. Fatrolman Phil Neltz was the first there, and at once discovered that several horses were in the burning stable. He threw open the doors, and at the risk of being injured by the flames or from falling timbers, drove out the five horses. The fifth animal balked at the door, and Mr. Neltz had some trouble in getting him away. The delivery wagon of the firm, as well as a handsome bugsy, was saved.

Mr. Anderson, who arrived after the flames had practically wrecked the stable, said that the insurance would fully cover the loss

As the flames were at the highest an aged gentleman approached Patrolman Schillef, who was keeping the curious crowd from entering the alley from Brook Avenue, and asked that an officer be stationed near his home on Marshall Street in order to make the crowd keep away. His son, he said, was ill with typhold faver, and the noise of those on the street but added to his sufferings. The request was promptly compiled with.

It was first reported that the Masonic Temple was on fire, and hundreds rushed to Broad Street, Engines Nos. 4 and 5 and Truck Company 3, responded to the alarm, and had streams playing on the flames from plugs on Broad Street, Marshall Street and the street intersecting. There was no necessity for a second alarm.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

Wants Information as to Balance

Left Over from Last Year.

A meeting of the Council Committee on Finance was held last night at the City Hall. Mayor McCarthy, City Auditor Warren and Treasurer Pace were present by invitation of the committee to give them some additional information as to the exact balance left over from the year 1906, which will be included in the amount available for distribution in the budget. Under a recent ordinance of the city, a change is being made in the system of bookkeeping in the auditor's office, and a new ledger is being opened. In order to ascertain the exact amount left over from last year, and available this year, the money now in the treasury and derived from bond issues for specific purposes, must be deducted from the apparent balance. There were several such bond issues during the year, the ful amount derived frim which has not yet been expended, but which is credited to the special fund for which it was intended, and cannot be used for any other purpose.
